ABOUT the COURSE

SCOPE of

Disaster Management and National Security Course

The course focuses on the causes of disasters and 'how to minimize' their impact on national security. The course will enable students to learn different areas of disaster management, which include- management of the situation, response to the needs of the people, evacuation process, distribution of food and issues related to Chemical, Biological, Radiological and Nuclear (CBRN) Disasters.

Career prospects:

Disaster Management and National Security course will help in availing opportunities in the state apparatus as well as in private organisations. The course will be beneficial for engineers, medical health representatives, environmental experts, rehabilitation workers and social workers.

NGO's and International Organisations such as World Bank, Development Bank, Red Cross and UNESCO offer various opportunities for professionally trained Disaster Management professionals. Moreover, students with their Post-Graduate Diploma in this subject can also start their own consultancies.

Rationale of the PG Diploma:

There has been a considerable increase in disasters in the 21st century due to wars, terrorism, climate change etc. The changes in the eco-systems due to infrastructural development, industrialization, changing life styles and changing socio-cultural environment have a great impact on national security. The multitude and magnitude of hazards have an adverse effect, globally.

India, like many other developing nations, faced multiple hazardous situations, both natural and man made.

There is hardly any formal training in disaster management being imparted to the youth and working professionals, and the awareness was not taught even to senior government officials. This has resulted in mismanaging various disasters. Armed forces are very deeply involved in disaster management.

Disaster Management is a multidisciplinary topic, which needs to be given due importance and it is also a dire need that has multitude of implications.

Individuals, communities and administrators are not well acquainted with prevention, mitigation and response regimes.

Any Disaster which affects a country's economy, disrupts day to day life, adversely threatens the national security of the country.
